The reservoir was demolished in 1900, to make way for the New York Public Library, a consolidation of the Lenox, Astor and Tilden Foundations, which was opened May 23, 1911. The Library, constructed of Vermont marble, cost about $9,000,000 and is one of the most beautiful buildings on Fifth Avenue. Opposite the reservoir on Fifth Avenue, between 41st and 42nd Streets, was located for years Rutgers Female College. This institution occupied the buildings known as The House of Mansions or The Spanish Row. They were erected about 1855 by George Higgins, who thought that eleven dwellings, uniform in size, price and amount of accommodation, of durable fire-brick, and of a chosen A/. He notified the public in his prospectus that the view from the windows was unrivalled, as it commanded the whole island with its surroundings. The project was not, however, a success, and, later, most of the block was occupied by Rutgers Female College. This institution was first opened in the spring of 1839, on ground given it by William B. Crosby, at 262-264-266 Madison Street, which had been part of the estate of Colonel Henry Rutgers, a distinguished Revolutionary officer...
