Not illustrated. 1913 Excerpt: .he cannot escape the impression that here is actual life and that right-doing is an admirable thing. This is the idea that recently prompted Professor Milton Fairchild of Baltimore, in a lecture before the teachers of Topeka, to advocate the appointment of a moral instructor by the University of Kansas to go about the State with a motion picture giving visual instruction in the effects righteousness and wickedness. That the moving picture is training the sympathy of the modern child can scarcely be doubted. I, myself, noticed children crying in a little theatre when they saw the innocent boy in the picture taken into his home to be punished for a deed he did not commit; when I was a youngster we stood giggling outside the door waiting with unholy glee for the first sounds of lamentation. It is this very ability of cinematography to expose injustice, cruelty, and suffering in all their naked ugliness that has impressed the clergymen and church workers with the importance of this marvelous invention of the last decade. In the teaching of the young and of the morally deficient, therefore, it is destined to hold a larger place than many people realize. Thus, when we find two such widely different institutions as the State! Penitentiary at Olympia, Washington, and the Episcopal Sunday School at Bristol, Tennessee, using the pictures for the same purpose--the impressing of the lessons of decency, health, industry, honesty, and love--we may wisely conclude that here is...
